ALWAYS PROGRESSIVE!

There never is any question as to which store sets the pace for Buffalo Nobody ever looks beyond us for new eas in storekeeping and nobody cares what merchants say in their own praise. The particular fact is that this siness has never stopped growing in all the years you've known it, and this year the stride ahead is greater than er

Everything is being done that can be done to make the store thoroughly up-to-date. The organization is etter now than at any time, and a fresh infusion of brains make it as keenly active to-day as though it were a and new business

Summer Millinery!

It's scant courtesy to your intelligence to tell you that you'll have to have a new hat or bonnet. Nevertheless e do it, for the sake of telling you something else—you can't buy anything more stylish, more novel, at a less rice than you can here. That's quite a sentence and may need some qualification. We've the style—that you'll dmit. We're the price—that needs no admission. And we're novel enough to have nothing old; but we don't go for impossible novelties—styles that might sun themselves on showy Parisian boulevards, but which look izarre on plain American streets.

The trimmed millinery show the drift of style. They were made in the fashion centres. We welcome your leas and trim according to your tastes.

SUMMER DRESS GOODS!

If your buying thought is Dress Goods, write to us stating the kind of fabric you have in mind, or the purpose r which you desire to use it, with the price you wish to pay, and we will promptly place in your hands samples f the best we can supply at the price. That should mean the best anywhere, for our stock of Dress Goods is the argest and best selected we know of. If you do not know the technical name of the goods, no matter; tell us how oey look to your eyes, or how you suppose they look, and we will find them.

Mail orders filled promptly. Samples sent free to any address.

ADDITIONAL LOCALS.

—Last Saturday a marriage license was issued to B. F. White, of Kushequa, and Miss Mabel L. Foster, of Eldred.

—The benefit gotten up by Mr. Bell at the opera house for Mr. Tull was a success, about $25 being realized.

—Mrs. John Hewitt, of Farmers Valley presented her husband with a girl baby of regulation size last Tuesday.

—Two very handsome and popular Rambler bicycles, one black and one full nickel received by Dr. Pierce this week.

—Last Tuesday H. W. Rubin moved his family into the Episcopal parsonage at the corner of King and Fulton streets.

—Last Tuesday the Maccabees of Ormsby commenced the erection of a hall the dimensions of which will be 22x52 feet.

—Manager Brown, of the Kane ball team, heartily thanks the people of this place for the corteous treatment extended to the Kane boys.

—The managers of Rose hill cemetery suggest that every lot owner give one day next week and put his or her lot in good order. Saturday of next week is Decoration Day.

—Monday's Era says, Charles A Durfey, a well known citizen, died at his rooms in the Durfey block at 6:30 last evening, from the effects of a stroke of paralysis. Deceased was aged 58 years

—C. M. Colegrove has placed his fine 3 year old colt, recently purchased from W. I Lewis at Coudersport in the hands of H. B. Freeman, at Bradford, for training. This colt is well bred and no doubt will make a trotter that will surprise some of our local sports.

—Judging from the stories told by some of the hotel proprietors whose application for license was met by a remonstrance, a person would naturally infer that hotel accommodations were at a premium in McKean county. Wait a while and you will hear them say that times are dull and that there is very little travel.

—Some say advertising does not pay. Last week we made an error in A. E. Stickles' adv. which greatly reduced the price of sweet corn. Mr. Stickles says that since the adv. appeared, his store has been crowded every day, which shows that every advertisement is carefully read by people looking for the best bargains.

—C. M. Colegrove was up to Norwich surveying last Monday and he reports the fire of the day before as having been something fearful. He said that the cinder that set the oil ablaze in the tank at Colegrove had been carried by the wind fully three-quarters of a mile. Bark cuttings had been swept entirely clean by the raging fire.

—Most everyone who attended the circus last week seemed quite well pleased with the entertainment. The lady who walked barefooted on sharp edged swords drew well merited applause. The elephant was well trained. The horses were not up to date. The clowns were good. The trapeze and lofty tumbling were also very good.

—Boyd, a little son of John Machale, of Titusville, aged 18 months was with his grandmother, Mrs. A. W. Boyd, of Sawyer City. On Sunday last the little fellow got possession of some "rough on rats," and unfortunately swallowed some. A physician was summoned and antidotes administered, but without avail. The child died Monday afternoon.

—Last week one of Bradford's frivolous damsels tried to leave this sphere via amonia route. Having too many beaux, who were jealous of one another she took a dose of amonia, which had a tendency to take the skin off her mouth, but it did not kill. A stomach pump relieved her of the burning fluid and she has time to reflect and it is to be hoped repent.

—Last Saturday a postal card reached this office that R. H. Duntley, of this place, and Miss Phebe A. Root, of Corydon, were married by the Rev. M. F. Trippe, on May 13th, at the residence of the bride's parents in Corydon. The MINER offers congratulations to the happy young couple and hoped that their voyage along the sea of life may be calm and peaceful.

—That prince of good fellows among newspaper men, David Dennison, of the Era, has allowed his choler to arise, owing to the fact that he was caught napping on third base. Now Dave, this is hardly fair to accuse people of being red headed, when you know that your own beautiful top covering has such a rich, carroty colored tint that it makes all the fraternity envious of its beauty.

—On May 14th, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Olmsted, of Coudersport, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedded life. They have been residents of Coudersport a great many years. Eight boys and two girls have been born to bless their home. Mr. Olmsted was prothonotary of Potter county for 21 years, 18 of which were of consecutive service. Mr. Olmsted and sons have a large hardware store and do an extensive business.

An Exciting Episode.

Last Monday moroing F. W. Berlin, of Eldred, started on his wheel for a visit to friends in Clarion county. When he arrived here he called on Rev. J. W. Sanborn and invited Mr. S to accompany him as far as Kane, which was accordingly done and time passed pleasantly in discussing the honorable work they were both engaged in. When about three miles beyond Mt. Jewett, in decending a hill both gentlemen were somewhat startled by hearing a fearful rumbling noise. They soon discovered it to be a runaway team hitched to a lumber wagon with no driver; the lines resting in the box, with the front end of the box resting on one of the standards of the bolster. As the team passed them Mr. Sanborn said, "I am going to catch them" and away he went in pursuit. After about three-quarters of a mile hard riding, he came up beside the team and jumping off his wheel climbed into the rear end of the box and finally succeeded in stopping the team An old farmer, who was working in a field near the road and saw the team stopped, remarked that he had learned one good use for a bicycle. The team was not injured in any manner, but were considerably over heated. Mr. Sanborn is deserving of praise for the bravery he exhibited in climbing into the rapidly moving wagon with the box elevated as aforesaid, as it was liable to fall off any minute. The team belongs to a butcher in Mt Jewett, and were frightened by a train of cars.

Narrow Escape.

The Potter Democrat of last Tuesday gives a very thrilling account of an accident that occurred to Sheriff Edward Gillon and his wife in which the sheriff was quite seriously injured. His esteemed better half escaped with a few bruises. They were driving on the river road about 5 miles below Coudersport, near Mina, and were ascending a high dugway when a bicycle rider was seen approaching. The horse became frightened and tried to climb the steep bank on the right and finally jumped over the steep embankment, landing on the rocks and logs 30 feet below. Mr. Gillon fell on a log. Assistance arrived soon and conveyed them home, where it is said, Mr. Gillon will be compelled to remain for a couple of weeks.

Epworth League Services

The programme advertised by the Epworth League of the M. E. church here was fully carried out last Sunday night. Mrs Lemmler read a paper on the "History of the League," Miss Edna Church read a paper on the "History of the Junior League." Misses Martha Brennan, Inez Hibbard and Nellie Roberts gave excellent recitations. The singing by the Junior League was very good. Mrs. Viola Carpenter, of Mt. Jewett, sang two solos—first, "The Plains of Peace," second "The Holy City." These two solos were well rendered and highly appreciated by the entire audience. Mrs. Carpenter is an artist in vocal music; her voice is as clear as a bell, and it is a treat to listen to her sweet tones of song.

A Comedy of Errors.

Smethport opened the season at Hamlin Park yesterday and were defeated by their long-haired opponents from Kane. Score: 8 to 7. Smethport had the game well in hand until the eighth inning, but their "woozy" playing lost them the game in the end. "Babe" Sasse's fielding, Keefer's base running and Dodge's pitching were the redeeming features.

Taylor, Parker Hotel, Gardeau; J. F. Keating, Larrabee; F. J. Silfies, Clermont; James F. Kelley, Kane. Attorney Edgett withdrew the application for a brewery license in Bradford. There were 55 licenses granted. Four were withdrawn. Mr. Mulqueen's application was held over until the June term of court. Thirteen were refused, which gives a licensed place for every 830 of the population in the county.

A Speedy Horse.

Last Sunday afternoon news was wired to Bradford that an oil tank was on fire at Colegrove. Mr. P. Newell ordered his faithful esquire to harness his celebrated steed, Frank N., to his buggy. When the animal was driven up to the door Mr. Newell jumped in, and seizing the reins away he went. When the train from Bradford bearing Mr. O'Brien arrived Mr. Newell was at the Wright House here waiting to convey Mr. O'Brien to Colegrove. That Mr. Newell has a fine driver goes without saying and he is justly entitled to feel proud over the possession of such a speedy animal.

S Naval Academy at Annapolis, the time to be 1 p. m. and the place his office at Warren. The examining board comprises Lt. J. P. Jefferson, Col. Jas. O. Parmlee, W. W. Wilbur, Esq., Dr. August Morck and Dr. Richard B. Stewart. All applicants should be promptly on hand on the above date.

Fire at Colegrove.

Last Sunday afternoon an oil tank above Colegrove caught fire. It contained about 8000 barrels of Lima oil. By the time the fire was subdued about 4000 barrels had been destroyed. About half of the tank was saved. It was reported at one time that two more tanks had caught fire, but the report proved groundless.

—The Galeton Dispatch says that the Rexford railroad, which runs from Galeton up the South Branch, a distance of four miles, will be extended to Germania, two miles further This will be of great advantage to Germania, and undoubtedly a great saving to Galeton, as it will obviate the necessity of building the projected pipe line from Germania to Galeton for the transportation of beer. Galeton is rapidly forging to the front and will soon assume metropolitan airs.

Economy In Purchasing Different Forms of Plant Food.

The most expensive form in which nitrogen is usually purchased is that of sulphate of ammonia. When high grade sulphate of ammonia sells for $70 a ton, each pound of nitrogen in it costs about 17 cents. When high grade nitrate of soda sells for $45 a ton, each pound of nitrogen in this form costs about 14 1-8 cents. As between these two forms the nitrogen of one is nearly 3 cents a pound cheaper than the nitrogen of the other, and it will therefore be found more economical to use nitrate of soda rather than sulphate of ammonia when special circumstances do not require the use of the latter. Dried blood, containing 13 per cent of nitrogen, at $4 a ton, furnishes nitrogen at an approximate cost of 14½ cents a pound. The nitrogen in fish scrap may cost somewhat less. In such forms as wool waste, ground leather and hair, nitrogen may be purchased at much less, but these forms are not economical when anything like quick returns are desired.

The cheapest possible manner in which farmers can provide their crops with nitrogen is by means of such plants as clover. Nitrogen supplied in this way can be made to a considerable degree to take the place of the nitrogen of commercial fertilizers and at a greatly diminished cost.

Soluble phosphoric acid can in general be more cheaply purchased in the form of dissolved rock than in the form of dissolved bone or boneblack.

Muriate of potash costs less than sulphate, and is therefore more economical, when its use answers one's purpose. With the exception of a few crops, like tobacco, sugar beets and potatoes, muriate of potash can nearly always be used to advantage. Potash in the form of carbonate, as found in wood ashes, is apt to be somewhat expensive. When ashes contains 5 per cent of potash and 2 per cent of phosphoric acid and cost $10 a ton, each pound of potash costs about 8 cents, while in the form of muriate or sulphate the cost would be about one-half. It is easily conceivable, however, that on certain soils the use of ashes might prove more economical, owing to their indirect action on the soil. The only way of telling with absolute certainty whether ashes will prove more economical than other forms of potash is to make an actual trial.

In applying fertilizers, bulk is often desirable, but in purchasing commercial fertilizers, the object should be to secure as much nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid in available forms as possible for $1, instead of as many pounds as possible of fertilizer, regardless of the amount of plant food contained in it. This is particularly applicable to mixed fertilizers, which at present form the great bulk of fertilizers sold in this state. It is, as a rule, more economical to purchase fertilizers in their concentrated forms. For illustration, it is more economical to purchase one ton of a high grade fertilizer than three tons of a low grade fertilizer, one ton of the former containing the same amount of plant food contained in three tons of the latter, because, in making the latter, three times as much labor is involved in mixing the goods, three times as many packages are required, and three times as much freight must be paid, all for the same amount of plant food.—Bulletin New York Experiment Station.

Trees and Draintiles.

When locating trees, have regard to the presence of draintiles leading from the house and other buildings. A writer in American Gardening tells of instances where drains have been completely stopped on account of the roots of trees entering them and forming a mass of growth sufficient to fill the pipes. In one such case the offenders were trees of catalpa species, a remarkably rapid grower under favorable conditions. It is rapid growing, soft wooded trees, the roots of which are greedy to take up moisture, that make trouble in draintiles.

Hard wooded trees, such as the apple and other fruits, likewise the oaks, sugar maple or elm, are not apt to do so; willow, poplar, ailanthus and alder, as well as the catalpa, may.

News and Notes.

The cultivation of peanuts for commerce is confined to about six states.

A dozen bills have already been introduced in congress to promote in some form irrigation schemes for the reclamation of the arid region.

The great object in composting manure or causing it to ferment under the most favorable conditions is to make it finer and render its plant food somewhat more available.

It is claimed for Siebert's Early that it is "the earliest true lima bean ever offered."

When you start the plow in the garden let the fowls in to follow the furrow. They will pick up worms, insects and their larvæ, also weed seeds.

C. E. Bessey reports adversely upon the introduction of sachaline. His report is based upon two years' observations on its growth. Its foliage is said to be unfit for forage, and no animal has shown a disposition to eat it.

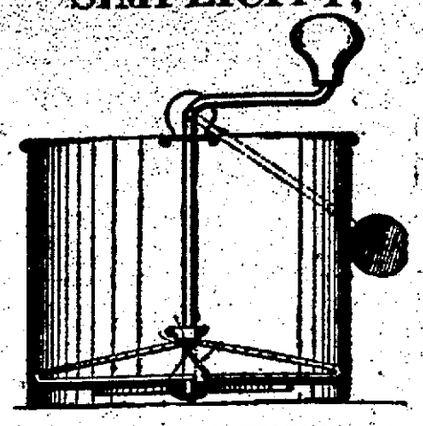
RARE OPPORTUNITY

For Enterprising Capitalists and Speculators to obtain control of a Decided Superior Invention which combines

SIMPLICITY,

CHEAPNESS,



EFFICIENCY.

THE HOUSEWIFE'S FRIEND

This very desirable kitchen utensil has been invented and patented by Mrs. Kate Freeman Taylor, of Smethport, Pa.

The device is admirably arranged for its peculiar work, and will quickly reduce boiled Potatoes, Turnips, Pumpkins, Carrots or other vegetables of like nature, to a fine, smooth pulp entirely devoid of lumps. The body of the device is cylindrical, with a wire mesh bottom in which the vertical crank shaft turns, the upper bearing being a span bar secure across the top. At the lower part of the shaft are rigidly secured a pair of radical wings which are inclined at an angle towards the direction of rotation, and whose lower edges rake closely upon the selve bottom. A pair of stiff wire arms also project at right angles to the blades or wings and serve as stirrers and breakers.

It is peerless for Whipping Cream, Beating Eggs, making Fine Snows, Apple sauce without pairing or coring the apples; Peaches without pairing, as it retains all the best flavor which is in the fruit. Cranberry sauce, Chili sauce, without chopping or draining, and to scald the ripe tomatoes, turn through and they are ready to boil. Over two thirds of your time saved. Write for descriptive circulars.

☞ Negotiations for the disposal or development of this patent will be under the direct supervision of the Patentee.

FLAMES IN WASHINGTON.

Twenty-one Buildings Burned, Two Men Killed and Two Injured.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—A conflagration which resulted in the loss of almost $500,000 and in which two firemen were killed and three seriously injured by falling walls occurred in this city.

Twenty-one buildings with their contents were totally destroyed in the space of about two hours. The burnt section consists almost entirely of a commission and wholesale jobbing houses in the square bounded by B street, Louisiana avenue, Ninth and Tenth streets.

The fire started in a branch station of the Postal Telegraph company on B street and is supposed to have been caused by lightning, a severe thunder storm having just before passed over the city.

The list of the dead and injured, all of whom are firemen, follow:

Dead:
— Giles, engineer, Company No. 9.
— Griffin, member of Truck No. 8.
Injured:
Joe Mulhall.
J. Mellwo.
Arthur Donaldson.

In addition to the above three others are missing.

A rough estimate places the loss on the buildings on Louisiana avenue at $75,000 and on B street at $50,000.

Much of the property is held by the Van Ness and Semmes estates and is believed to be well insured.

Sam Bonsinger's horse bazaar in the same block was also destroyed, involving an estimated loss of $25,000.

TWO MEN RUN DOWN.

Struck and Killed by an Engine Near Newark, N. Y.

NEWARK, May 19.—The West Shore local freight engineer, Richard Petinger, struck and instantly killed two men at the Blue Cut, three miles east of Newark.

The bodies were brought here and put in the charge of an undertaker. One of the men was about 55 years old, the other 24. Neither has been identified.

In the pocket of the older was found an envelope upon which is written, "Joseph M. Fisher, Boonville, N. Y." A mark had been drawn through each word, but on the left side of the envelope is written, "Joe Fisher, 198 Spring street, Buffalo, N. Y., care of Mr. McGregor, Hurlburt House."

The head of the older man was crushed, the side badly bruised and both feet cut off.

Nothing at all was found in the pockets of the younger man. His neck was broken and his face crushed in. The men were walking the track when killed. They dressed respectably and are not believed to be tramps.

Suit Against Sheriff Tamsen.

KINGSTON, N. Y., May 19.—Suit for $10,000 has been entered against Sheriff Tamsen of New York by Mrs. Jennie Williams of Mount Pleasant, in the Catskills, for injuries she claims to have received while imprisoned in the Ludlow street jail last winter. She was arrested by Anthony Comstock on the charge of sending improper letters through the mail. She alleges that during some sports among her fellow prisoners in the jail, Keeper Bennett threw a hammer which glanced from the mark and hit her in the abdomen. She was subsequently released on nominal bail, having been ill for a month and gave birth to a child one week later.

New Organization of Conductors.

ALBANY, May 19.—The incorporation papers of the Railway Conductors' club of North America were filed with the secretary of state. The society is organized for the purpose of establishing, through discussions and the interchange of opinions and experience, the highest standard of excellence in the manner of handling freight and passenger trains. The home of the society will be in New York city and branches of it will be located in all parts of the country. The directors for the first year are: Charles Weiss of Middletown, Henry Staats of New York city and Charles D. Cramer of Brooklyn.

Catskills Forest Fires.

KINGSTON, N. Y., May 19.—The forest fires in the Catskills, which have been raging for several days, are now more serious than ever. The famous Stony Clove is ablaze for miles on either side. Mountain after mountain has been licked up, and the blackened crags are smoking for miles and miles. From Lanesville through the Notch the massive slopes are all aflame, and the smoke is so dense that passengers on the Stony Clove trains can scarcely see or breathe at times. Many of the residents are fighting the flames to save their homes from destruction.

IDENTIFIED ONCE MORE

Body of "Mrs. Everett" Again Recognized.

IT IS MRS. E. E. HILL THIS TIME.

Her Father-in-Law and an Attorney Identify the Remains Apparently Beyond Doubt For Doubt.

The Woman Was a Variety Actress.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Another identification of "Mrs. Everett" has been made. Lawyer J. Kantrowitz of 235 Broadway went to the coroner's office in company with Judge Ralph Hill of Indianapolis. The latter thought the dead woman might be his daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. E. Hill. E. E. Hill is at present living in London, and his wife is said to have come here a short time ago.

Lawyer Kantrowitz stated that the woman may be the Mrs. E. E. Hill who went to his office on May 1 and there made a deed of her property in Columbus, O., to her husband. He identified the brown waist, the blue jacket and the hat, now at the coroner's office, as those worn by the woman when she called to see him. Mr. Kantrowitz was given a permit to view the body at the morgue.

When Kantrowitz and Mr. Hill arrived at the morgue they positively identified the woman as Mrs. E. E. Hill.

Kantrowitz said he had known her since she was a little girl, and he also remembered her particularly because of her visit paid to his office on May 1. He said that at the time she made the deed in favor of her husband he thought it a strange proceeding and after it was over intended asking her about it. She left the office hurriedly, however, and before he could get a chance to speak to her.

Mr. Hill also identified the woman as his daughter-in-law.

Mr. Kantrowitz said that Mrs. Hill's husband, Edgar E. Hill, conducted a theatrical agency in London, where he was known as E. Zereka. He also added that the woman was an expert with a revolver.

The first intimation that the young suicide was Mrs. Hill came from her husband in London.

Mrs. Hill left London mysteriously about five weeks ago and her husband wrote to his father, after reading the story of the Colonnade suicide, asking him to see the body, as the "Mrs. Everett" might be his wife.

Mr. Hill accordingly came here from Indianapolis and viewed the body at the morgue. At first he could see but a slight resemblance to his daughter-in-law, although the general contour of the head and body was the same. He had not seen her, however, in two years and besides the body has been so long in the morgue that recognition is made very hard. Mr. Hill said that when the woman came here from London she was first heard from at the Continental hotel. After that all trace of her was lost.

Mr. Hill said his daughter-in-law's maiden name was May D. Keith and that she was born in Columbus, Ind. She is the daughter of Colonel John A. Keith of that place.

She and Edgar E. Hill had been married about six years. Most of their married life was spent in London.

Clerk Osgood of the Continental hotel also went to the coroner's office and identified the leather satchel of the suicide as the one Mrs. E. E. Hill had while she remained at the hotel.

Moses Esberg, the partner of Lawyer Kantrowitz, also went to the morgue to see the body. He said he identified it as that of Mrs. Hill by her prominent teeth and the general features. He then accurately described the blue serge dress which is at the coroner's office, but which he had not gone to see. He said that she wore the same dress when he saw her at the law firm's office. The clerks in the office of Kantrowitz & Esberg will call at the morgue to verify the identification.

Mrs. Hill came to this city from London about April 15. She was a variety actress and also traveled under the name of Zerega, the name used by her husband, whose theatrical agency is located at 159 Brompton Row, London.

The address of the theatrical agency is another point which has a strong bearing on the authenticity of this identification. Mrs. Everett's shoes have stamped on the inside: "Harriet's stores, Brompton Row."

After both lawyers had so positively identified the body as that of Mrs. Hill, Colonel Hill said that he was now convinced that the suicide was his daughter-in-law. He will cable to his son to find out what disposition he wishes made of the remains.

SENOR ZEREGA INTERVIEWED.

Thinks the New York Suicide May Not Be His Wife.

LONDON, May 19.—A representative of the press called upon Senor E. Zorego at 159 Brompton road to ascertain from him particulars regarding Mrs. E. E. Hill, who is his wife, and to tell him that friends of Mrs. Hill in New York believe that she is identical with "Mrs. Everett," who committed suicide at the Colonnade hotel in New York under mysterious circumstances.

Senor Zerega, as he is known here, is a guitar and mandolin player, as was his wife. He is a smart, dapper man, about 30 years old.

In response to the statements by the representative of the press Senor Zerega said that he had already heard by cable of the supposed identification of Mrs. Everett as his wife, but he refused to believe that it was true until stronger proofs were adduced.

"My wife went to New York on April 4," he said, "for an extended visit. There had been no quarrel between us and I know of no possible reason for her to commit suicide."

Senor Zerega thought, he said, that there must be a mistake, though he admitted that he had not heard from his wife for some time. He believed that she was staying at the Continental hotel in New York, where both of them usually stayed when they went to America.

A picture of the Colonnade hotel suicide, printed in the New York Herald of May 9, was shown Senor Zerega, but he declared that he recognized nothing about it.

"Business engagements have prevented me from going to New York to inquire into this matter myself," said Senor Zerega.

Another representative of the press has seen a person who knew Senora Zerega well. This person said that Senora Zerega was a very gifted player, and had played twice before Queen Victoria in Osborn House in 1895. She came from Seville, this informant said, and she believed had lived happily with her husband.

When the pictures in The Herald were shown to this acquaintance of Senora Zerega, she immediately recognized the trunk, the wrap and the hat as the same with which the senora had left London. She recognized the dress and the style of the hair in the portrait and also the lower part of the face; but the middle part of the face was blotched in the printing. Upon reading the description of the suicide, she said that it tallied with the senora as to the babylike hands. The cycling shoes, also, were probably hers, as she was a cyclist. She also wore extra high patent leather boots. The senora had an account at Harrod's stores in London. The mark on the gloves of the New York suicide is said to have read indistinctly "Made expressly for Hoods stores.

McCoy Wins on a Foul.

BOSTON, May 19.—Newton Street armory was crowded with sporting men to witness the bouts arranged by the Suffolk Athletic club.

The principal event was a 15-round bout between Kid McCoy and Mysterious Billy Smith.

Smith rushed from the call of time and fought an aggressive fight, but resorted to foul tactics and was warned repeatedly by the referee.

Smith closed the sixth round by breaking foul for the third time during the bout, and Referee Daly, after repeated warnings and according to agreement, awarded the match to McCoy on the foul break.

Joe Walcott challenged the winner at 158 pounds for any time and place.

Dixon and Zimpfer In Toronto.

Nervous Prostration

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nervine.

Prolonged derangement of the nervous system not only affects the brain and mental powers, but develops disease in some of the vital organs. The most dangerous of these indirect results is when the heart is affected. This was the case of the Rev. N. F. Surface, Fawn River, Mich., who writes under date of Feb. 14, 1895:

"Fourteen years ago I had a slight stroke of paralysis. Overwork brought on nervous prostration. I was exceedingly nervous and the exertion of public speaking caused heart palpitation that threatened my life. I used two bottles of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure for my heart trouble, and two of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for my nervousness and feel better than I ever expected to feel again. I can speak for hours without tiring or having my heart flutter as it formerly did, and I have you to thank that I am alive today."

A TRUE STORY.

In a cabin at the foot of the Blue Ridge Mountains lived a beautiful girl with her aged father. They were very poor, and as their little "Mountain Home" was soon to be sold under a mortgage, it was with joy that the old father welcomed as a suitor for his daughter's hand an old and wealthy friend of his youth, who, having come to pay him a visit, had fallen in love with the charming girl. She, having lived so long in poverty, was quite carried away by the tales told her by the rich old friend regarding the wealth and splendor of his city home, and he offered her land, gold and diamonds if she would become his bride. She had a dark-eyed mountain lover, who was too poor to offer her anything but roses.

WHICH DID SHE CHOOSE?

The question is answered in the (3) verse song and chorus entitled:

"DIAMONDS OR ROSES,"

Words and Music by C. H. ADDISON.

This is one of the most catchy, brilliant and fascinating songs ever published, and is now being sung with great success in all the large cities. Price 40 cents.

THE Methodist general conference at Cleveland indorsed Major McKinley as their candidate for president.

IN spite of all the snubbing ropes that have been thrown out, McKinley's boom seems to be sailing on serenely.

WHAT has become of the income tax that was so thoroughly discussed through the press a little over one year ago?

OLD Dame Democracy will be compelled to offer a reward in order to secure a favorite son to carry her fan during the presidential race.

THE State Medical Society of Pennsylvania held their 46th annual convention in the hall of the House of Representatives at Harrisburg last Tuesday.

No one but a few would be favorite sons, and their henchmen, have any doubt as to McKinley's financial views or his fitness for the presidency. The rank and file of the Republican party are for him almost to a man.

THE General Conference of the M. E. church held at Cleveland, Ohio, on Tuesday last, elected the well-known singer, Chaplain C. C. McCabe bishop on the 15th ballot. Dr. Earl Cranston was declared elected bishop on the 16th ballot. There are 16 members of the board of bishops of the M. E. church north.

RHODE ISLAND has planned a new Capitol 333 feet long by 122 feet wide, with a dome 244 feet high, its cost to be $1,576.000. This amount would hardly repair the cracks in New York's $22,000,000 Capitol.—Globe Democrt. Hold on there, Rhode Island has no business extending her Capitol into other states. She must keep on her own territory.

The Raines liquor tax law will reduce Wellsville taxes this year by $2,673. The aggregate from liquor licenses in Wellsville this year is $3,945, $3,600 from the fees under the Raines law and $345 for the two months licenses from March 4th to May 4th The Raines law will save Wellsville taxpayers $3,473 in round numbers; $2,673 in town taxes and about $800 in State taxes—Friendship Register.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 18, 1896.—If Speaker Reed would abide by the wishes of most of his friends and admirers, he would take the second place on the ticket to be nominated at St. Louis, even if he cannot get the first place, as Gov. McKinley seems to come very near to having a mortgage on that. In fact, there can be no doubt that the combination of those two names on the ticket would give satisfaction to more Republicans than any other that could be made, and aside from those who have personal reasons for wishing one or the other of them to head the ticket, it is probable that Reed and McKinley would be equally as satisfactory as McKinley and Reed. Whatever may be the relations existing between some of their individual friends, Speaker Reed and Gov. McKinley, although for the second time rivals for high party honor, are on the most cordial terms with each other, and they have already proven by the great work they did in the fiftieth Congress, after having been rivals for the Speakership of the House, that they work well in double harness and make a very strong team That neither of these men should hanker after the Vice Presidency is not strange, but they are both thorough Republicans, and as such would not refuse to accept duty imposed on them by the National Convention. It is safe to predict that if the convention selects these two men neither will decline.

It might look a little queer to see Senator Hill make a speech at the Chicago convention nominating Mr Cleveland for a third time, but precisely that prediction was made in my hearing by a gentleman who has been singularly fortunate in fore telling political events Mr. Hill must be anxious to see Mr. Cleveland get a worse drubbing than the voters of New York gave to David B. when he ran for Governor against Gov Morton, if he is really thinking about nominating Mr. Cleveland

Mr Cleveland has rewarded Commissioner Lochren for carrying out his pension policy by giving him a life job as U S Judge for the District of Minnesota. Dominick I Murphy, of Pennsylvania, now first deputy, has been nominated to succeed Lochren as commissioner, and N. P. T. Dana, now chief of a division in the office, to succeed Murphy There will be no change in the Cleveland-Pension policy until after the 4th of next March.

It had been evident for some time that Col. Dupont would not be seated as Senator from Delaware. The combined Democratic and Populist vote makes a majority of one in the Senate, and that was the margin upon which Col Dupont was kept out of the seat to which he was entitled If the Populists had voted against Col Dupont on conviction, there would be "no kick coming" to the Republicans, but they didn't.

About six men in the Senate will prevent the adoption of Senator Morgan's joint resolution instructing the President to recognize Cuban belligerency, although all the other Senators, nine tenths of the House and an overwhelming majority of the people of this country favor its adoption. It is the same old story This handfull of Senators have indicated their intention to talk all summer if necessary to prevent a vote on Senator Morgan's resolution, and the other Senators know that the Senate rules are such, that it is only a question of physical endurance that will stand in the way of the threat being carried out. Consequently there is not much probability that the resolution will be seriously pushed. Some day the Senate will probably have rules which will enable the majority of its members, and not a determined and obstinate minority, to say what shall be done and to do it Until then wise men will not expect too much from the Senate.

The Senate wants to know a little more about what is being done in behalf of the Americans who were tried by a court martial in Cuba and sentenced to death, than the meagre story the State department has made public, that the Spanish Government had set aside the sentences and directed that the men be tried again in a civil court, and as the surest way to get what it wanted adopted without a division, a resolution calling on the President for the information.

No definite steps have been taken about adjournment by the Senate, and it is not expected that anything will be decided upon until the rest of the appropriation bills have been disposed of. In fact, decided objection has been made by Senators to setting a date for adjournment. It is believd that it will take two more weeks to finish up the appropriations, and that adjournment will very quickly follow as it has been in a sort of tentative way agreed to by both Republican and Democratic steering committees that no bills likely to start an extended debate shall be taken up. That means that nothing of importance will be touched after the appropriations are out of the way.

The Supreme Council A P A decided that that the attempt of a minor committee to boycott Gov McKinley was unjustified

A Great Medicine Given Away.

A W. Colegrove, Smethport; C. M. Benson, Colegrove; N. W. Stickney, Newerf, are now giving free to all a trial package of the great herbal remedy, Bacon's Celery King If ladies suffering from nervous disorders and constipation will use this remedy they will soon be free from the headaches and backaches that have caused them so much suffering. It is a perfect regulator. It quickly cures billiousness, indigestion, eruptions of the skin and all blood diseases.

POOR old "Madam Democracy" will find herself quite a prominent wall flower at Chicago. There does not seem to be any of the eligible Democratic gentlemen who are anxious to waltz over the presidential course with the old lady this fall. Of course some one will be compelled to make a sacrifice of himself in order to keep up appearances, but he will have a very downcast look and act as though his heart was not in the dance.

IF THERE was any evidence required why Major McKinley should be nominated it can easily be found in watching the English press and see the view they take on the matter. They are all bitterly opposed to McKinley A very good maxim and one that General Grant always advocated and followed was to do exactly the opposite of what the enemy desired By following the above rule be rarely failed

IN 1892 our national debt was $585,029,330 and the intereht on the above was $22,893,883. In 1895 our national debt was $716,202 060 and the interest on the above debt was $29.140,790. "Uncle Sam" will find it rather expensive allowing the Democratic party an opportunity to play running the government.

THE question of immigration restriction will not down. Congressman W. A. Stone, of Allegheny, insists that the bill compelling Consuls at foreign ports to make an inspection of immigrants before they are permitted to sail for this country, will be passed or the people of the United States will make it warm for somebody, and he is right.—Telegraph

The Biggest Fool at Large

Is the individual who persistently neglects his health, and the means of preserving and restoring it Many persons who are not constitutional idiots do this. They are genuine objects of compassion as well as censure. A failure of appetite, loss of sleep and flesh, impaired digestion, an uncertain state of the bowels and symptoms of billiousness are so many warnings of the approach of disease. To disregard them is abject folly, which offended nature in due time punishes severely, if not fatally That genial and thoroughly reliable preventive of bodily mischief in the shape of chronic disease, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will, if resorted to in time, avert those disorders, to the removal of which it is also fully adequate. Among these are chronic indigestion, liver complaint, kidney troubles constipation, nervousness, rheumatism and malaria.

BOY'S CLOTHING SPECIALS

When we say that we have something "special," we mean exactly what we say. It is not every day that we claim to have a bona fide special, but when we do it is one that does not belie the term. Wheu we say our all-wool $2.23 boys' 2-piece suit is a "special," in that it cannot be duplicated elsewhere for less than $3.50, we mean it in good faith. Then there is that suit for $3 69 that we know is being sold all over for $4.75. Our boys' clothes are made by the best workmen, and finish and make are guaranteed. We have a complete line of separate pants from 25c up. Durability is the first aim in the selection of a boy's suit and ours are distinctly marked in this direction. We have a fine dress suit in English Clays and Worsteds that we sell at $4.45 These are regular $6.00 goods. They make nice confirmation suits. Can be had in blue and black.

So stimulated were his faculties that his sense of hearing in its acuteness took in every word of the conversation between the seconds, a few paces distant. He heard his adversary's second say carelessly to the deputy sheriff: "I presume this is a case where there will be no apology or mediation," and the deputy's reply: "I reckon my man means business, but he seems a little queer." He heard the other second laugh and say lightly: "They're apt to be so when it's their first time out," followed by the more anxious aside of the other second as the deputy turned away: "Yes, but by G—d I don't like his looks!" His sense of sight was also so acute that having lost the choice of position, when the coin was tossed and being turned with his face to the sun, even through its glare he saw with unerring distinctness of outline the black-coated figure of his opponent moved into range, saw the perfect outline of his features, and how the easy, supercilious smile as he threw away his cigar appeared to drop out of his face with a kind of vacant awe as he faced him. He felt his nerves become as steel as the countering began, and at the word "three" knew he had fired by the recoil of the pistol in his leveled hand simultaneously with its utterance. And at the same moment, still standing like a rock, he saw his adversary miserably collapse, his legs grotesquely curving inward under him, without even the dignity of death in his fall, and so sink helplessly like a felled bull to the ground. Still erect, and lowering only the muzzle of his pistol, as a thin feather of smoke curled up its shining side, he saw the doctor and seconds run quickly to the heap, try to lift its limp impotence into shape, and let it drop again with the words: "Right through the forehead, by G—d!"

"You've done for him," said the deputy, turning to Clarence with a singular look of curiosity, "and I reckon you'd better get out of this mighty quick! They didn't expect it—they're just ragin', they may round on you—and"—he added more slowly—"they seem to have just found out who you are!"

Even while he was speaking, Clarence with his quickened ears heard the words, "one of Hamilton Brant's pups." "Just like his father," from the group around the dead man. He did not hesitate but walked coolly toward them. Yet a certain fierce pride—which he had never known before—stirred in his veins, as their voices hushed and they half recoiled before him.

"Am I to understand from my second, gentlemen," he said, looking around the group, "that you are not satisfied?"

"The fight was square enough," said Pinckney's second, in some embarrassment, "but I reckon that he"—pointing to the dead man—"did not know who you were?"

"Do you mean that he did not know that I was the son of a man proficient in the use of arms?"

"I reckon that's about it," returned the second, glancing at the others.

"I am glad to say, sir, that I have a better opinion of his courage," said Clarence, lifting his hat to the dead body, as he turned away.

Yet he was conscious of no remorse, concern or even pity in his act. Perhaps this was visible in his face, for the group appeared awed by this perfection of the duelist's coolness, and even returned his formal parting salutation with a vague and timid respect. He thanked the deputy, regained the hotel, saddled his horse and galloped away.

But not toward the rancho. Now that he could think of his future, that had no place in his reflections; even the episode of Susy was forgotten in the new and strange conceptions of himself and his irresponsibility which had come upon him with the killing of Pinckney and the words of his second. It was his dead father who had stiffened his arm and directed the fatal shot! It was the hereditary influence—which others had been so quick to recognize—that had brought about this completing climax of his trouble. How else could he account for it that he, a conscientious, peaceful, sensitive man, tender and forgiving as he believed himself to be, could now feel so little sorrow or compunction for his culminating act? He had read of successful duelists who were haunted by remorse for their first victim; who retained a terrible consciousness of the appearance of the dead man; he had no such feeling; he had only a grim contentment in the wiped out inefficient life, and contempt for the limp and helpless body. He suddenly recalled the callousness as a boy, when face to face with the victims of the Indian massacre his sense of fastidious supercilliousness in the discovery of the body of Susy's mother—surely it was the cold blood of his father influencing him ever thus. What had he to do with affection, with domestic happiness, with the ordinary ambitions of man's life, whose blood was frozen at its source! Yet even with this very thought came once more the old inconsistent tenderness he had as a boy lavished upon the almost unknown and fugitive father who had forsaken his childish companionship, and remembered him only by secret gifts. He remembered how he had worshiped him even while the pious padres at San Jose were endeavoring to eliminate this terrible poison from his blood and combat his hereditary instinct in his conflicts with his school fellows. And it was a part of his inconsistency that, riding away from the scene of his first bloodshed, his eyes were dimmed with moisture not for the victim, but for the one being whom he believed had impelled him to the act.

This and more was in his mind during his long ride to Fair Plains, his journey by coach to Embarcadero, his midnight passage across the dark waters of Francisco—but what should be his future was still unsettled.

As he wound around the crest of Russian hill and looked down again upon the awakened city he was startled to see that it was fluttering and streaming with bunting! From every public building and hotel; from the roofs of private houses, and even the windows of lonely dwellings flapped and waved the striped and starry banner. The steady breath of the sea carried it out from masts and yards of ships at their wharves—from the battlements of the forts at Alcatez and Yerba Buena. He remembered that the ferrymen had told him that the news from Fort Sumter had swept the city with a convulsion of patriotic sentiment, and that there was no doubt that the state was saved to the union. He looked down upon it with haggard and bewildered eyes—and then a strange gasp and fullness of his throat! For afar a solitary bugle had blow—the "reveille" at Fort Alcatraz!

"You've done for him," said the deputy.

PART II.

CHAPTER I.

Night at last, and the stir and tumult of a great night over. Even the excitement that had swept this portion of the battlefield—only a small section of the vaster area of struggle—into which a brigade had marched held its own, been beaten back, recovered its ground, and pursuing, had passed out of it forever, leaving only its dead behind and knowing nothing more of that struggle than its own impact and momentum—even this wild excitement had long since evaporated with the stinging smoke of gunpowder, the acrid smell of burning rags from the clothing of a dead soldier fired by a bursting shell, or the heated reek of sweat and leather. A cool breath, that seemed to bring back once more the odor of the upturned earthworks along the now dumb line of battle, began to move from the suggestive darkness beyond.

But into that awful penetralia of death and silence there was now no invasion—there had been no retreat. A few of the wounded had been brought out, under fire, but the others had been left with the dead for the morning light and succor. For it was known that in that horrible obscurity riderless horses, frantic with the smell of blood, galloped wildly here and there, or, maddened by wounds, plunged furiously at the intruder, that the wounded soldier, still armed, could not always distinguish friend from foe or from the ghouls of camp followers who stripped the dead in the darkness, and struggled with the dying. A shot or two heard somewhere in that obscurity counted as nothing with the long fusillade that had swept it in the daytime; the passing of a single life, more or less, amounted to little in the long rollcall of the day's slaughter.

But with the first beams of the morning sun—and the slowly moving "relief detail" from the camp—came a weird half resurrection of that ghastly field. Then it was that the long rays of sunlight, streaming many a mile beyond the battle line, first pointed out the harvest of the dead where the reserves had been posted. There they lay in heaps and piles, killed by solid shot or bursting shells that had leaped the battle line to plunge into the waiting ranks beyond. As the sun lifted higher its beams fell within the range of musketry fire where the dead lay thicker—even as they had fallen when killed outright—with arms extended, and feet at all angles to the field. As it touched these dead upturned faces, strangely enough it brought out no expression of pain nor anguish, but rather as if death had arrested them only with surprise and awe. It revealed on the lips of those who had been mortally wounded and had turned upon their side the relief which death had brought their suffering, sometimes even with a smile. Mounting higher, it glanced upon the actual battle line, curiously curving for the shelter of walls, fences and breastworks—and here the dead lay, even as when they had lain and fired, their faces prone in the grass, but their muskets still resting across the breastworks. Exposed to grape and canister from the battery on the ridge, death had come to them mercifully also—through the head and throat. And now the whole field lay bare in the sunlight—broken with grotesque shadows cast from sitting, crouching, half-recumbent, but always rigid, figures, that might have been effigies of their own monuments. One half-kneeling soldier, with head bowed between his stiffened hands, might have stood for a carven figure of grief at the feet of his dead comrade. A captain shot through the brain in the act of mounting a wall lay sideways half across it, his lips parted with the word of command, and the sword still pointing over the barrier the way that they should go.

But it was not until the sun had mounted higher that it struck the central horror of the field and seemed to linger there in dazzling persistence, now and then returning to it in startling flashes, that it might be seen of men and those who brought succor. A tiny brook had run obliquely near the battle line. It was here that the night before the battle friend and foe had filled their canteens side by side with soldierly recklessness, or perhaps a highef instinct, purposely ignoring each other's presence; it was here that the wounded had afterwards crept, crawled and dragged themselves, here they had pushed, wrangled, striven and fought for a draft of that precious fluid which assuaged the thirst of their wounds—or happily put them out of their misery forever; here, overborne, crushed, suffocated by numbers, pouring their own blood into the flood and tumbling after it with their helpless bodies, they dammed the stream, until, recoiling, red and angry, it had burst its banks and overflowed the cotton field in a brave pool now sparkling in the sunlight. But below this human dam—a mile away—where the brook still crept sluggishly, the ambulance horses sniffed and started from it.

The detail moved on slowly, doing their work expeditiously and apparently callously, but really only with that mechanical movement that saves emotion. Only once were they moved to an outbreak of indignation—the discovery of the body of an officer whose pockets were turned inside out, but whose hand was still tightly grasped on his buttoned waistcoat, as if resisting the outrage that had been done while still in life. As the men disengaged the stiffened hand, something slipped from the waistcoat to the ground. The corporal picked it up and handed it to his officer. It was a sealed packet. The officer received it with the carelessness which long experience of those pathetic missives from the dying to their living relations had induced, and dropped it in the pocket of his tunic, with the half dozen others that he had picked up that morning, and moved on with the detail. A little further on they halted in the attitude of attention as a mounted officer appeared riding slowly down the line.

There was something more than the habitual respect of their superior in their faces as he came forward. For it was the general who had commanded the brigade the day before—the man who leaped with one bound into the forward rank of military leaders. It was his invincible spirit that had led the advance, held back defeat against overwhelming numbers, sustained the rally, impressed his subordinate officers with his own undeviating purpose, and even impressed among them an almost superstitious belief in his destiny of success. It was this man who had done what was deemed impossible to do—what even at this time it was thought unwise and unstrategic to do—who had held a weak position, of apparently no importance, under the mandate of an incomprehensible order from his superior—which at best only asked for a sacrifice and was rewarded with a victory. He had decimated his brigade, but the wounded and dying had cheered him as he passed, and the survivors had pursued the enemy until the bugle called them back. For such a record he looked still too young and even effeminate, albeit his handsome face was dark and serious and his manner taciturn.

His quick eye had already caught sight of the rifled body of the officer and contracted. As the captain of the detail saluted him he said curtly:

"I thought the orders were to fire upon anyone desecrating the dead?"

"They are, general, but the hyenas don't give us a chance. That's all yonder poor fellow saved from their claws," replied the officer as he held up the sealed packet. "It has no address."

The general took it, examined the envelope, thrust it into his belt and said: "I will take charge of it."

The sound of horses' hoofs came from the rocky roadside beyond the bush. Both men turned. A number of field officers were approaching. "The division staff," said the captain, in a lower voice, falling back.

They came slowly forward, a central figure on a gray horse leading here, as in history. A short, thick-set man with a grizzled beard closely cropped around an inscrutable mouth, and the serious formality of a respectable country deacon in his aspect, which even the single star on the shoulder-strap of his loose tunic and his soldierly seat in the saddle could not entirely obliterate. He had evidently perceived the general of the brigade and quickened his horse as the latter drew up. The staff followed more leisurely, but still with some curiosity to witness the meeting of the first general of the army with the latest. The division general saluted, but almost instantly withdrew his leather gauntlet, and offered his bared hand to the brigadier. The words of the heroes are scant. The drawn-up detail, the waiting staff listened. This was all they heard.

"Hullock tells me you're from California!"

"Yes, general."

"Ah! I lived there too in the early days. Wonderful country. Developed greatly since my time, I suppose."

"Great resources. Finest wheat-growing country in the world, sir. You don't happen to know what the actual crop was this year?"

"Hardly, general, but something enormous."

"Yes, I always said it would be. Have a cigar?"

He handed his cigar case to the brigadier. Then he took one himself, lighted it at the smouldering end of the one he had taken from his mouth, was about to throw the stump carelessly down, but suddenly recollecting himself leaned over his horse and dropped it carefully a few inches from the face of a dead soldier. Then straightening himself in the saddle he shoved his horse against the brigadier, moving him a little farther on, while a slight movement of his hand kept the staff from following.

"A heavy loss here!"

"I'm afraid so, general."

"It couldn't be helped. We had to rush in your brigade to gain time, and occupy the enemy until we could change front."

The young general looked at the shrewd, cold eyes of his chief. "Change front?" he echoed.

LITERARY NOTES.

In a brilliant essay, in "Harper's Magazine" for May, Brander Matthews shows the penalty of humor which every man must pay whose reputation as a humorist is wide enough to prevent the public from taking him seriously. "The Bringing of the Rose," by Harriet Lewis Bradley, is a modern ghost-story cleverly contrived, and as plausible as ghost-stories ever are. "The Editor's Drawer" is introduced with a farce, "First Aid to the Injured," by W. G. van Tassel Sutphen, in which the prevailing popularity of golf is made the basis of an extremely amusing situation.

T. F. Anthony, Ex-Postmaster of Promise City, Iowa, says: "I bought one bottle of 'Mystic Cure' for Rheumatism and two doses of it did me more good than all the medicine I ever took." Sold by A. B. Armstrong, Druggist, Smethport, Pa.

Harper's Magazine
IN 1896
Brisels, a new novel by WILLIAM BLACK, written with all the author's well known charm of manner, will begin in the December Number, 1895, and continue until May. A new novel by GEORGE DU MAURIER, entitled The Martians, will also begin during the year. It is not too much to say that no novel has ever been awaited with such great expectation as the successor to Trilby. The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc will continue and will relate the story of the failure and martyrdom of the Maid of Orleans. Other important fiction of the year will be a novelette by MARK TWAIN, under the title, Tom Sawyer, Detective; a humorous three-part tale called Two Mormons from Muddleby, by LANGDON ELWYN MITCHELL; and short stories by OCTAVE THANET, RICHARD HARDING DAVIS, MARY E. WILKINS, JULIAN RALPH, BRANDER MATTHEWS, OWEN WISTER, and other well-known writers.
Prof. WOODROW WILSON will contribute six papers on George Washington and his times, with illustrations by HOWARD PYLE. POULTNEY BIGELOW'S history of The German Struggle for Liberty, illustrated by R. CATON WOODVILLE, will be continued through the winter. Two papers on St. Clair's defeat and Mad Anthony Wayne's victory, by THEODORE ROOSEVELT, with graphic illustrations will be printed during the year.
A noteworthy feature of the Magazine during 1896 will be a series of articles by CASPER W. WHITNEY, describing his trip of 2500 miles on snow-shoes and with dog-sledge trains into the unexplored Barren Grounds of British North America in pursuit of wood-bison and musk-oxen. Mr. WHITNEY'S series will have the added interest of being illustrated from photographs taken by himself.
The Volumes of the Magazine begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will begin with the Number current at the time of receipt of order.
Remittances should be made by Post-office Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance or loss.

In 1896 like attention will be given to every notable happening. The events in art, literature, music and the drama will be fully presented. W. D. HOWELLS in his department, Life and Letters, will, in his interesting way books and the questions of the time. E. S. MARTIN'S sprightly gossip of the Easy Chair will be continued. Stuck in the Animal's Ear.

Apropos of the recent remarks on the question of assisting fallen horses on to their legs, one of my readers mentions the old plan of suddenly shouting in the prostrate animal's ear, the shouter having first placed himself out of reach of the animal's legs. This plan is, no doubt, very efficacious in the case of a quadruped that can get up and won't, but I fear that it would be of little service to the poor beast that wants to get up, but can't.

A Hungarian correspondent also tells me that in this country drivers assist the horse by putting under him the rug with which they cover him when standing still. I have seen the same expedient resorted to here, but a man can often only put a rug under a fallen horse at the risk of getting his brains kicked out, and when the rug is adjusted it often gives little or no foothold on a slippery wood or asphalt pavement. With all respect, then, I still think that civilization ought to be capable of something better.—London Truth.

Buried Hatchets.

In reporting a meeting in some of the churches, the preacher said that "several hatchets were buried, handles and all." We like that. The trouble is too often that in burying hatchets the handles are left within reach.—Louisville Western Recorder.

A special from Milan, Mo., says: The entire Locust valley is under water.

The floods have at last reached the suburbs of Milan, causing much damage.

A great deal of stock in the valley is reported to have perished. Trains on the Quincy, Omaha and Kansas City road have stopped, and several bridges near Milan on that road are wrecked. A portion of the Burlington tracks are under water, but its trains are still running.

Mrs. Hill's Past Life.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Press this morning has the following special from Indianapolis:

"Mrs. May D. Hill had a pathetic history. Her father, Colonel John Keith of Columbus, Ind., has been one of the most prominent attorneys at the Southern Indiana bar and, while a man of brilliant parts and successful, was so eccentric at times that his neighbors readily marked a strain of insanity.

Some years ago he was traveling in the South and on board a train killed a man. He was acquitted on the ground of emotional insanity. His daughter had every luxury and advantage, having been graduated at Vassar. She was of great beauty in her youth and was extremely vivacious. Immediately after she left Vassar, about 17 years ago, she and Hill were married.

He was a handsome, dashing fellow, of no regular occupation. His family stands high professionally and socially in this city.

The young couple were of a roving disposition and made a tour with the Swiss Bell Ringers.

It is said that they played several times before Queen Victoria.

Tommy Ryan Defeats Dunfee.

BUFFALO, May 19.—It took just six rounds for Tommy Ryan to take the measure of Joe Dunfee at the Buffalo driving park. The fight was witnessed by over 2,000 people, including large delegations from Syracuse, Rochester and the interior of the state. Both of the principals hailed from Syracuse, and the question of their superiority has long been a source of argument in that city.

The evening's sport was conducted by the Empire Athletic club. Tom Kelly, the club referee, acted in that capacity.

Dunfee was plainly outclassed, being unable to land with any effect and resorting to clinches to save himself. Ryan did all the leading and in the sixth round finished his man up with a swing on the jaw. Referee Kelly gave the decision to Ryan.

Relief in Six Hours.

Distressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the "New Great South American Kidney Cure. This new remedy is a great surprise on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by A. B. Armstrong, Druggist, Smethport, Pa.

Many cases of so called heart disease, are only cases of acid fermentation in the stomach. The irritation from the acid hinders the action of the heart, through the pneumogastric nerve, and very often the excessive restraining power of this peculiarly acting nerve, becomes a very serious matter; the heart makes the greatest effort to do its work, but there is a shortness of breath which cannot be made up for, and the feeling throughout the chest is very distressing. Sometimes this acid arises and causes an acrid smarting in the throat; at other times the burning is up and down the chest.

Another stomach trouble is that form of dyspepsia which gives pain after eating. Persons with this disease seem to have but a scant measure of nerve strength; when food is being digested, the stomach needs the concentration of all of the nerve and brain force, and if reading or close thought is attempted soon after eating, the stomach commences that intolerable aching which dyspeptics dread so much, when, the only immediate relief appears to be to stop the mental activity and get up and move around. In such cases there is evidently for the time being, too little nerve power to divide between the stomach and the brain; each one alone needs it all to enable it to perform its labor.

There are two properties possessed by Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic, which constitute it a cure for all of the above derangements. One, is its power of purifying and sweetening the stomach and stopping the formation of gas and acid; the other is the giving of increased nerve action and strength. Soon, with better digestion and better nutrition, there is a general renewal of life and health. The mind of a business man, under its use, soon become clearer and more active, thoughts come easier and are more clearly expressed, the memory is stronger, business plans and ventures are arranged in a better manner and are more patiently and successfully carried out, and details are attended to better because of the increased strength of both mind and muscle.

Women having the care of a household on their minds, find Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic to be a great blessing; it gives better digestion, better nutrition, more strength, cures that feeling of weariness in the morning, that anxiety of mind, that fear that something is going wrong or that something bad is going to happen; cures dizziness, shortness of breath, pressure through the chest; belching of wind, rumbling in the bowels, heartburn, and all forms of dyspepsia that come from weakness.

Mrs. Eben Pierce, of Boris, Potter Co. Pa., write: "I can truthfully say that I owe my life to your stomach and nerve tonic; I was troubled with my stomach for over a year and tried everything I could hear of, but did not get any benefit. I was nearly in despair, for although I had only four in my family, I could not begin to do the work for them; an anxious friend wrote me to try Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic, and I did; I did not expect to ever get any better, but was greatly relieved on taking the first dose and now after taking only one bottle of your remedy I can do my work and my stomach does not hurt me only when I do very heavy work; I shall continue its use until I am entirely cured, for I am perfectly satisfied that it will cure all such stomach trouble. I thank you dear Doctor, a thousand times over, for putting before the public such a wonderful remedy for human suffering."

Mrs. Albert Harman, of 2305 Fifth Ave., Altoona, Pa., writes, "Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic has done me a power of good; that burning after meals has left me; I have always been so nervous that I would take nervous spells so bad sometimes that I would have to send for the doctor, but have not had one since I commenced using your stomach and nerve tonic."

H. C. Beatty, Barkeyville, Pa., says: "For years I had a severe pain in my stomach after meals; one bottle of Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic cured me; I think, permanently."

J. C. Fulton, of Burgettstown, Pa., writes, "I have been afflicted with the rheumatism and was laid up in bed a good part of the time; my stomach was in a bad condition and would not retain food. I began to use Dr. Day's Stomach and Nerve Tonic it not only helped my stomach but relieved me of the rheumatism and also increased my weight wonderfully."
